

Monday, August 17, 2009

Training company Integrity Interactive names Tom Anderson CEO

By Brendan Lynch

Integrity Interactive Corp. reports it has named Tom Anderson CEO. Prior to joining Integrity, a Waltham-based e-learning company, Anderson was a senior vice president at Sallie Mae Inc.

Anderson had been CEO of college savings account company Upromise Inc. when it was purchased by Sallie Mae in 2006. Previously, Anderson was CEO of AmeriFee, a medical finance company owned by Capital One Financial Corp., where he was also a senior vice president. Before joining Capital One, Anderson was a partner at McKinsey & Co., where he worked on banking, consumer credit, insurance, health care and technology.

Anderson also sits on the board of email marketing company Constant Contact Inc. Anderson has bachelor's degree from Dartmouth College and a master's degree from the MIT Sloan School of Management.

Integrity's recent announcement is the third CEO change in three years, with founder and CEO Carl Nelson being replaced in 2007 by David Curran, the former CEO of Data Communique Inc.

Integrity Interactive, which was previously based in Dedham, was founded in 1999 to assist companies with employee training in 140 different compliance areas, with 25 different courses including harassment.